

Support From Across the Borders

Recent floods in Pakistan are the worst ever natural catastrophe in the past century. Waters have washed away a lot more than what meets the eye; people are left with miseries alone.

Nepali doctor, Dr. Govinda K.C. living across the borders felt the pain and distress of the flood affected people of Pakistan. Their destitution compelled him to leave the comforts and love of his home, and come to Pakistan to help our people.

This Nepali national is an orthopedic by profession, hence offered his services to lessen pain of the suffering humanity. Through Pakistani embassy at Katmandu, Dr. Govinda K.C. met with the officials of National Disaster Management Agency (NDMA), which duly referred him to National Commission for Human Development (NCHD).

Dr. Govinda had joined NCHD team on August 24, 2010 at its relief camp at Nowshera and is currently serving at Polytechnic College, Risalpur.
